OPENING OF PARLIAMENT - SPERCH OF THE QUEEN-LORD PALMERSTON AND LOUIS NAPOLEON'S COUP

The British Parliament was formally opened by the Queen in person, on the 3d inst , when she delivered the Queen in person, on the 3d inst, when she delivered the following speech:—

My Lords and Gertheren.—The period has strived when, according to user. I can avail myself of your advice and assistance in the preparation and adoption of measures which the welfer of the country may require. I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. The complicated affairs of the Dutchles of Helstein and Following have continued to engage my attention. I have every reason to expect that the treaty between Germany and Denmark, which was cancelled at Berlin in the year before last, within a short time will be fully and completely executed. I regret that the war which broke out on the eastern frontier of the Cape of Good Hope, more than a year ago, still continues. I observe, with sincere satisfaction the tranquility which has prevailed throughout the greater perior leveland, and much regret that I have to inform you that certain parts of the convenience of armsgl, Denegan and Louth have been marked by the commission of outrages of the most serious description. The powers of the exiting laws have been promptly executed for the detection of the difference, and for the represence of a system of crime and violence fatal to the beet interests of the equatry. My attention will be directed to that impersant object.

Turning to the gentlemen of the House of Commons, her Majesty says:—

her Majesty says :-I have ordered the estimate of the expenses of the

I have ordered the estimate of the expenses of the current year to be laid before you. I rely with confidence on your logalty and real to make ad quate provisions for the public service.

Again addressing the Lords, her Majesty referred to the improvements contemplated to be made in the administration of justice in the various departments, bills in relation thereto having been directed to be prepared. The act of 1848, for suspending the operation of a previous act, conferring representative institutions on New Zealsand, will expire early in the next year. Her Majesty expresses harself happy to believe that there is no necessity for its renewal, and that no obstacle any longer exists to the sujoyment of representative institutions by New Zealsand.

to state to you that the large reductions of taxes, which have taken place of lare years, have not been attended with a proportionable diminution of the national income. The resenue of the past year has been fully adequate to the demands of the public service, while the reduction of taxation has tended greatly to the relief and comfort of my subjects."

Her Majesty concludes:—I acknowledge, with thankfulness to Almighty God, that tranquillier, good order and willing obedience continue to prevail generally throughout the country. It appears to me that this is a fitting time for calmly considering whatever may be advicable, and to make such amendments in the sot of the late reign relating to the representation of the Commons in Parliament, as may be deemed calculated to carry into more complete effect the principles upon which the law is founded. I have the fullest confidence that, in such consideration, you will firmly adhere to the acknowledged principles of the constitution, by which the pre-oratives of the errown the authority of both houses of Parliament and the righte and liberties of the people, are equally secured.

No amendment was proposed in the address, in reply to the speech in either house. In the Commons, Sir Benjamin Hall saked for an explanation of the causes of Lord Falmerston's resignation, which the Premier immediately gave, asserting that Lord Paimerston way, refractory—treated the Queen's interrogations with contemptuous silence—neted independently of his collegues—and unreservedly approved the recent lilegal coup dieta of LouiseNapoleon. To this Palmerston replied at some length, and, though damaging his late collegues, he did not improve his position. In the course of his speech, he paid a willing and merited eulogium on the character of the American Minister at Loudon.

The Earl of Berby, in his speech on the address, im-plied his approbation of Louis Napoleon, condemned ministers for not putting the Ecclesiastical bill in force, and once more demanded protection for the agricultural portion of the community, and the abolition of the inocme tex. But the receipts at the shipping ports being large—being stated as already largely in excess of last year—and the shipments to this market being also large, (67,000 bales in the week, and something less than this quantity being long continuance of westerly gales have caused a desire to sell, and a quantity to be effered daily beyond what buye's require. Hence we have had rather a dull and heavy sort of a market for American cotton generally, and prices have slightly receded, but perhaps not more than one sixteenth of a penny in the pound, when compared with the business transactions at the date of our
